

Thirty-six finalists and one Lifetime Achievement Award winner have been named in Denver Business Journal's 21st Outstanding Women in Business awards program.

Daniels Fund President and CEO Linda Childears will be recognized as the 2019 Lifetime Achievement Award winner. Her decades of success in the financial and philanthropic sectors, including current board positions with the Denver Metro Chamber of Commerce and Council on Foundations, have established Childears as an indispensable community leader and revered mentor.

In addition, DBJ honors women for their accomplishments in 12 industry categories: architecture, engineering and construction; banking, finance and accounting; communications, media and public relations; education, government and nonprofits; energy; health care; large business owners (more than 20 employees); law; Mile High Leaders (industries that don't fit neatly into existing categories); real estate; small business owners (20 or fewer employees); and technology and telecommunications.

Outstanding Women in Business

5 OF 38 THUMBNAILS

Becky Zimmermann, president of Design Workshop, is a finalist in DBJ's 2019 Outstanding Women in Business awards in the Architects, Engineering and Construction category.

PROVIDED BY BECKY ZIMMERMANN